THE ADMINISTRATION VINDICATED.

In the special message of President Taft to the United States senate in the matter of our governmental policy in Alaska and of the malicious efforts to create scandals out of it and create an unjustified popular prejudice against the administration gets complete vindication, and the president proves beyond all question or quibble that the statements in the recently published newspaper article calculated to connect him and his brother with highly-improper dealings in government business were a work of "falsity and maliciously slanderous character." With the great bulk of the American people, unprejudiced and without viciousness of purpose, such vindication and proof were not necessary—they had faith in the administration and its head. But the chief executive was not content to fall back on that. He went to the roots of the conspiracy, tore them up and exposed the thing. The affair is a closed incident as far as the administration and the president are concerned.

But congress has a duty to perform. It should lose no time in taking steps to unearth the responsibility for the libellous faked postscript. Who wrote it—if it ever was written at all—and palmed it off as genuine on the muckraking "newspaper story" specialist? Or did it have its conception right in this latter quarter? If the creators of such malicious libels are to go unexposed and unpunished, no man in the government service is safe.

"Stronger evidence of the falsity and the maliciously slanderous character of the alleged postscript could not be had," says the president in his message. "Its only significance is the light it throws on the bitterness and venom of some of those who take active part in every discussion of Alaskan issues."

"The intensity of their desire to besmirch all who invest in that district and all who are officially connected with its administration operates upon the minds of weak human instruments and prompts the fabrication of such false testimony as this postscript. I dislike to dwell upon this feature of the case, but it is so full of a lesson that ought to be taken to the heart of every patriotic citizen that I can not pass it over in silence."

Congress surely cannot "pass it over in silence." Let it go to the bottom of the thing at once! The wool and the cotton schedules can wait for "tinkering" at the regular session.

"WHITE SLAVERS" BUSY.

That an organized business is being carried on in San Francisco by the white slave traders is indicated by the stories told by girls who have been lured from their homes during the past few weeks. Under the McCarthy administration, with the dance halls open all night and unlimited license given the immoral element of the city, conditions favor the vile traffic. The fathers and mothers whose daughters have been deceived and dragged into the beginning of lives of shame can regard the mas sacrifices to the mayor's administration to give San Francisco "a liberal government."

The state took a hand in the case of Helen Whitson, the mere child who was rescued from her captors in a far retreat of the Santa Cruz mountains. We trust its officers will remain on the trail of the wretches who have been taking McCarthy at his word and send them to prison. Nothing is to be hoped for from the police, for if Chief White should attempt to round up the procurers of the tenebrous he would be ousted from office as was Chief Seymour.

McCarthy's "Paris of America" can not be conducted in San Francisco unless there are girls for the abandoned life of the city. It hungers for girls and exerts every effort to ensnare them. It finds them in the downtown cafes where McCarthy insists that there shall be no interference with the nightly orgies, in the public dance halls of the Mission where children in short dresses are served with liquor; in the evil resorts that border Golden Gate Park and stretch out along the ocean boulevard—in all the show places of the "Paris of America" where social codes are broken and conventions flouted under the benign and generous approbation of the mayor of the city.

And every macquereau, every white slave trader, every vulture who preys on the victims of the rotten business, every habitue of the dives and deadfalls of the underworld, will vote, if he has a vote, for the continuance of the "liberal" mayor in power.—Sacramento Union.

A CAUTIOUS PATRIOT.

Although he has posed as a self-sacrificing patriot, it seems that Francisco I. Madero, provisional president of the Mexican revolutionists and candidate for the office of president of Mexico, is possessed of at least the normal bump of caution. That Madero is fully aware that republics are notoriously ungrateful is evidenced by the fact that he is now shipping his cattle out of the country to the American side of the line, where they will be safe in the event that he is overwhelmingly defeated in the coming elections. Senor Madero is willing to take a gambler's chance at the presidency, but he is by no means willing to stake his all upon it. He realizes that near-presidents must eat, and that there is a cold, hard winter ahead for unsuccessful revolutionists.

Madero's precautions would indicate that he has no great faith in the stability of the government which he has helped to establish. His attitude is very much that of the presidents of unstable South American republics, who keep their funds abroad and who always have a vessel ready to transport them out of the country in the event of a sudden revolution. Madero has little faith in the safety of private property in Mexico when he takes such measures to get his own property beyond the jurisdiction of that country.

Senor Madero has been closely associated with the heads of the new government, and he is thoroughly competent to form an opinion as to the prospects of peace and property security under it. Evidently the opinion he has formed is a rather poor one. Senor Madero considered his cattle perfectly safe on the other side of the Rio Grande while Diaz was in control, but, since his friends have come into power, he seems to have concluded that Mexico was a dangerous place for the storage of prospective beef.

Indications are that Senor Madero's judgment is good. Advice from Mexico indicates that Madero's chances for filling the shoes of ex-President Diaz are small. The provisional president will soon rejoin his cattle on the safe side of the Rio Grande. Because of his precautions and his careful heeding of the admonition that a man must eat, he will have lost nothing by the revolution in Mexico. The idealized "liberator" of Mexico turns out to be only a practical carpet-bagging revolutionist of the type that is found in the South American republics.

Senator Newlands wants congress to take a recess until the first Monday in November, and to have a new legislative program reported from committees, formulated during the recess. He justly says that to adjourn without a program "would repeat next winter, the waste of time, inertia, and inaction which have heretofore characterized senatorial procedure and brought it under deserved condemnation." There is a good deal in the Newlands idea; and besides, there would be a whole lot of curiosity to see what sort of a legislative program the senatorial committee would report.

Copper export figures show a distribution as follows for the past six months: Holland, 106,047,446 pounds; Germany, 88,614,552 pounds; France, 58,444,222 pounds; England, 48,660,115 pounds; Austria, 47,926,028 pounds; Italy, 16,932,185 pounds; Russia, 9,474,644 pounds; Sweden, 3,375,525 pounds; Canada, 2,127,638 pounds; six others, 471,090 pounds.

Billy Sunday, revivalist, says that it cost $620 to save a soul in Indianapolis. One hardly knows from this whether Indianapolis souls are uncommonly hard to save, or that Billy's pay check was high beyond all reason. He certainly makes reviving pay, if, as reported in the Indianapolis Star, he makes $80,000 a year out of it.

The bogus check industry is on the gain; and it is marvelous that it should be so; for how does any one pass a bogus check? Judging by the rigid questions asked when an "unknown" presents a check, one would be apt to think that the passage of a bogus check would be quite impossible.

A London company has acquired a tract of half a million acres in Rhodesia, Africa, and will go into cattle raising for the purpose of making beef extract. England evidently has no Gifford Pinchots, and is not bothering about conservation.

Voliva kissed and confirmed two hundred and eight-six babies at Zion City on a recent Sunday, and he can fairly claim it as a miracle if the microbe doesn't get any of the children—that is, as fairly as other claims of modern miracles are based.

The Chicago burglar who was arrested for stealing a stove the other day certainly can base his defense on insanity with every prospect of escaping the penitentiary. All his attorney needs to do is to introduce in evidence the thermometer record for that day.

"The country knows well enough for what I stand," says Champ Clark. Still we are sufficiently presumptive to ask what he really does stand for, now that he is helping the members of his party to keep on tinkering with the tariff without knowing what they are doing.

James Whitecomb Riley has just given a $75,000 library site to Indianapolis. Milton could not have done that. He sold "Paradise Lost" for $25.

The time for doing assessment work upon claims at Poreupine will probably be extended.

The smelter smoke question at Butte, Mont., is again up for discussion.

He was one of the pioneers of this camp and always a good booster, and will make a valuable member in the ranks of the "live ones," who are bringing the fertile valleys of Southern Oregon to the attention of the world.

AUTO BUILT ESPECIALLY FOR PROSPECTORS' USE

According to the Scientific American, the latest auto for mining men has been invented and built by W. H. Larsen, an assayer and mining engineer of Los Angeles. It is a highly original combination of motor car, Pullman coach and assay office. No details for comfort has been overlooked, including two folding berths, table, cooking outfit and all accessories. There is also a complete ore testing apparatus, with rotary flame combination furnace, Braun pulverizer and steel frame Chipmunk crusher. The car is 11½ feet long, 4½ feet wide and 9 feet high, is lighted by electricity and travels over the desert roads at an average speed of sixteen miles an hour.

Why Send Out of Town for Your Printing

When you can have first-class work done right here, by first-class union printers.

The business man who sends out of town for his printing injures his own business as well as that of others. While on the other hand the man who patronizes home institutions increases the town's pay roll, and thereby builds up his business.

The printers and book binders in the cities of surrounding states do not come here to spend their money.
